

Disclosure Statement

Luciana de Souza Leão

“The Impact of High School Financial Education: Evidence from a Large-Scale Evaluation in Brazil”

- 1) The source of funding is shown in the opening note to the paper.
- 2) In the past five years, I have received grants from Columbia University (USA) and the Federal University of Rio de Janeiro (Brazil). Any of these may be construed as having an interest in this research, even though this particular project was not funded through their grants.
- 3) I am not an officer, director, or board member of any organization.
- 4) None of the above disclosures apply to my family or relatives.
- 5) No other party, apart from my co-authors, had the right to review the manuscript. Numerous comments were received from academic and policy presentations and from our country partners, but we had full discretion in the content of the article.
- 6) IRB approval for this project was not obtained because the World Bank, the home institution for all authors of this paper, does not have an IRB. I began my graduate degree at Columbia University after concluding fieldwork on this project as a World Bank consultant.