

Disclosure statement for Daniel Sacks for “Does the individual mandate affect insurance coverage? Evidence from tax returns”

I have received financial support from Indiana University to pursue this research, as part of my normal responsibilities as a professor. This is only financial source that I have received for this research.

During the past three years I have not received financial support from any interested party.

I have not worked for any relevant organization, nor have my relatives or partner have worked or received financial support from any interested party or relevant organization.

This research was produced with a memorandum of understanding with the Office of Tax Analysis. As part of the terms of the MOU, OTA staff reviewed and approved all text and graphics prior to presentation. This review resulted in a change to the abstract in an earlier draft, but no changes to the main text.

If our article is accepted for publication, information on relevant potential conflicts of interest, if any, will be made available to the public.
