

Disclosures, Daniel Prinz, “The Liquidity Sensitivity of Healthcare Consumption: Evidence from Social Security Payments”

1. Sources of financial support for the research

Research reported in this publication was supported by the National Institute on Aging of the National Institutes of Health under Award Number P30AG012810 through the National Bureau of Economic Research Center for Aging and Health Research.

2. Potentially relevant professional and financial relationships in the past 3 years:

Institute for Fiscal Studies (salary)

World Bank (consulting salary)

ESRC Centre for the Microeconomic Analysis of Public Policy (grant support)

Harvard University Graduate School of Arts and Sciences (fellowship support)

Harvard Kennedy School (fellowship support)

Social Security Administration/National Bureau of Economic Research (fellowship support)

Harvard University (teaching fellowship salary)

Harvard Medical School (research assistant salary)

National Bureau of Economic Research (research assistant salary)

Social Security Administration/National Bureau of Economic Research (research grant)

Harvard Center for Population and Development Studies (travel grant)

Horowitz Foundation for Social Policy (grant support)

National Research, Development, and Innovation Office of Hungary (grant support)

3. Paid or unpaid positions of relevant entities.

None

4. Spousal or family-related COIs

None

5. Each author must disclose if another party had the right to review the paper prior to its circulation.

6. IRB approval

Approval was obtained from Harvard Medical School’s IRB.