

Disclosures, Daniel Prinz, “Healthcare Rationing in Public Insurance Programs: Evidence from Medicaid”

1. Sources of financial support for the research

This research was supported by the U.S. Social Security Administration (SSA) through the NBER Disability Research Center, the National Institute on Aging, the Laura and John Arnold foundation, and the Agency for healthcare Research and Quality.

2. Potentially relevant professional and financial relationships in the past 3 years:

Institute for Fiscal Studies (salary)

ESRC Centre for the Microeconomic Analysis of Public Policy (research grants)

National Research, Development, and Innovation Office of Hungary (research grants)

Horowitz Foundation for Social Policy (research award)

Harvard University Graduate School of Arts and Sciences (fellowship support)

Harvard Kennedy School (fellowship support)

Social Security Administration/National Bureau of Economic Research (fellowship support)

Harvard University (teaching fellowship salary)

Harvard Medical School (research assistant salary)

National Bureau of Economic Research (research assistant salary)

Social Security Administration/National Bureau of Economic Research (research grants)

Harvard Institute for Quantitative Social Science (travel grant)

Harvard Center for Population and Development Studies (travel grant)

VBID Health (consulting fee)

3. Paid or unpaid positions of relevant entities.

None

4. Spousal or family-related COIs

None

5. Each author must disclose if another party had the right to review the paper prior to its circulation.

SSA had the right to review this paper prior to release only for factual accuracy.

6. IRB approval

Approval was obtained from Harvard Medical School's IRB.