

Human Capital Accumulation at Work: Estimates for the World and Implications for Development

Asif Islam
The World Bank

Disclosure Statement
September 1, 2021

5. I acknowledge the generous support of the World Bank (Office of the Senior Vice-President and Chief Economist, Development Economics).
6. I am a World Bank staff member and developing this study as a background paper for the World Bank's "World Development Report 2019: The Changing Nature of Work" was part of my work program. Funding for this study, and my annual salary, was received from the World Bank's Office of the Senior Vice President & Chief Economist of Development Economics (DEC). The International Income Distribution Database was used by this paper as part of the 2019 World Development Report.

The DEC department of the World Bank is empowered to conduct independent research and does not have a financial, ideological, or political interest in the subject matter of this paper.

The findings, interpretations, and conclusions expressed in this paper are entirely those of the authors. They do not necessarily represent the views of the World Bank and its affiliated organizations, or those of the Executive Directors of the World Bank or the governments they represent

7. No other party had the right to review this paper before its publication.
8. The disclosures required above also apply to my close relatives and partner.