

Prediction Errors, Incarceration, and Violent Crime: Evidence from Linking Prosecutor Surveys to Court Records

Author: Emma Harrington

I received funding from the Lynde and Harry Bradley Foundation Award to support our travel to North Carolina to pilot the survey of prosecutors. My time in graduate school was also supported by the Harvard Stone Fellowship in Inequality.

I have received no significant financial support in the past 3 years from any interested party. I have no paid or unpaid position in any related profit or non-profit entities.

IRB approval was received under IRB19-1687 "Surveying North Carolina Prosecutors," Harvard University. The IRB review action was deemed "Exempt."

Our survey was not conducted in exchange for any services or payment. Participating offices did not have the right to review the paper, other than to ensure that we did not disclose information about their identify. Participating offices did not have the right to suggest any changes to content.
