

Disclosure statement

The author, Louise Lorentzon, declares that I have no information to disclose in relation to the submission of the paper “Dominated pension investments: the role of search frictions and unawareness” to the AEJ: Applied Economics. I have no relevant or material financial interest that relates to the research in this paper.

Funding: This work was supported by the Jan Wallander’s and Tom Hedelius’ foundation and Tore Browaldh’s foundation [grant number P2017-0069:1]; the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences [grant number SO2016-0077]; Stiftelsen Infina; and the Thule Foundation’s research program on long-term savings. The Swedish Pensions Agency contributed by sharing data.

The funding sources have no involvement in the study design; in the collection, analysis and interpretation of data; in the writing of the report; and in the decision to submit the article for publication.

In this paper we conduct a field experiment and analyze the effects using confidential Swedish administrative data from the Swedish Pensions Agency. This data can unfortunately not be published. Any researcher seeking to access the data would need to apply to the Pensions Agency directly.

The study was submitted to the Regional Ethics Review Board in Stockholm, Sweden. On September 14, 2017, the board decided that the study does not need to be reviewed for ethical approval since the study does not treat sensitive personal information covered by the Ethical Review Act.

Best Regards,

Louise Lorentzon
