

Re: AEJ-Applied submission, "WHO PROFITS FROM AMATEURISM? RENT-SHARING IN MODERN COLLEGE SPORTS"

To whom it may concern:

I provide specific answers to the five specific numbered questions contained in the American Economic Association disclosure document (<https://www.aeaweb.org/journals/policies/disclosure-policy>).

1. I received no non-salary support for the research in this paper.
2. I have not received any financial support in the past three years from a party that would have a financial, ideological, or political stake in the paper referenced above.
3. I am not an officer, director, or board member in a for-profit or non-profit organization that has a relevant relationship to the contents of the article referenced above.
4. None of my close relatives have received any financial support for my work on the paper referenced above. None of my close relatives have received any financial support in the past three years from a party that would have a financial, ideological, or political stake in the paper referenced above. None of my close relatives are an officer, director, or board member in a profit or non-profit organization that has a relevant relationship to the contents of the article referenced above.
5. No party had the right to review this paper prior to submission.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script, reading "Matthew J. Notowidigdo".

Matthew J. Notowidigdo [corresponding author]
Professor of Economics
University of Chicago Booth School of Business