

Disclosure Statement—Wei Yang Tham

“Money, Time, and Grant Design”

by Kyle Myers and Wei Yang Tham

The author declares that they have no relevant or material financial interests that relate to the research described in this paper.

Regarding the data policy, we fully intend to comply with all aspects to the extent possible given the IRB approved conditions of our study. Given that our data contains sensitive, personally identifiable information (PIID), we do not have IRB approval to publicly post the complete data underlying all of our analyses for use by any un-screened researcher.

However, we do have two approaches to addressing this: (1) we can post sub-sets of our data publicly that contain no PIID, which will allow for the replication of our main effect estimates; (2) if other researchers are willing to engage in a data sharing agreement that is approved by all relevant IRBs of the participating parties, we could be permitted to share the full data set containing PIID pending IRB approval.

If you have any questions, please don't hesitate to ask.