

Disclosure Statement

Author: Manasi Deshpande

Manuscript: “Does Welfare Inhibit Success? The Long-Term Effects of Removing Low-Income Youth from Disability Insurance”

Journal: American Economic Review

1) I acknowledge funding from the Social Security Administration (SSA) through grant #1DRC12000002-02 to the National Bureau of Economic Research and from the National Science Foundation (NSF) Graduate Research Fellowship under grant #1122374. The findings and conclusions expressed are solely those of the author and do not represent the views of SSA, NSF, any agency of the Federal Government, or the NBER.

2) I have not received significant financial support from any interested party.

3) I served as a member of the Social Security Advisory Board’s (SSAB) Disability Policy Panel in 2014. The SSAB is a “bipartisan, independent federal government agency established in 1994 to advise the President, the Congress, and the Commissioner of Social Security on materials of policy and administration to the Old-age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance and the Supplemental Security Income programs.”¹ The Disability Policy Panel studied the issue of continuing disability reviews and issued a report with recommendations.² I received an honorarium of $2,500 from SSAB for this service.

4) I have no disclosures for close relatives or partners to make.

5) The Social Security Administration (SSA) had the right to review this paper for factual accuracy and data non-disclosure prior to its circulation.

6) This paper has Institutional Review Board approval from NBER and MIT.

¹ Social Security Advisory Board website: <http://www.ssab.gov/About-the-Board>

² Report available at <http://www.ssab.gov/Details-Page/ArticleID/720/2014-Disability-Policy-Panel-Continuing-Disability-Reviews-December-2014>.