Note: Conditional survival rate defined as the share of firms that, after exporting for t calendar years continue to export for at least one more calendar year. The red line in each panel measures the average unconditional survival rate of all Chilean exporters over the sample period. More precisely, it is the average probability that a firm in the sample exports in calendar year t , given it exported in calendar year $t-1$. Export intensity measured as the ratio of a firm's exports to its total sales. Average export intensity is reported for new exporters that continue to sell to foreign markets for at least four calendar years. The red line measures the average export intensity for Chilean firms that export in every year of the sample--1995 to 2009. These are labeled Permanent Exporters.
