

Disclosure Statement for “Is No News (Perceived As) Bad News? An Experimental Investigation of Information Disclosure”

Ginger Zhe Jin

The author declares that he has no relevant or material financial interests that relate to the research described in this paper. Harvard University IRB approval was obtained for all experiments performed at the CLER laboratory at the Harvard Business School, and New York University IRB approval was obtained for all experiments performed at the CESS laboratory at New York University.

Part of the revision was carried out when I visited the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) from August 2015 to July 2017. During that time, all of my inputs into the paper were done at my spare time out of the regular working hours of FTC. Any opinion expressed in this paper does not represent that of the FTC or any of its Commissioners.

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'G Jin', with a stylized, cursive script.

Ginger Zhe Jin